Gartner positioned Genpact in the Challengers quadrant based on the evaluation criteria of ability to execute and completeness of vision in the area of end-user support for all IT services. As described in the report, "The competitive landscape, extensive client choices, continuing economic challenges and a zeal for cost cutting are keeping the price of help desk outsourcing low. This has driven many service providers to include alternative geographic locations for help desk agents. These locations may be onshore, nearshore or offshore."

"We are honored to be positioned in Gartner's Magic Quadrant, as we believe it validates Genpact's continued growth in providing intelligent technology solutions for our clients built upon effective business processes and domain expertise in key vertical industries," said KNK Venkataraman, senior vice president, IT Services, Genpact. "With a 100% client renewal rate, Genpact has provided clients with contract flexibility to accommodate additional volume, as well as an ability to build new delivery capabilities to adapt to client business changes, resulting in greater business outcomes."

Genpact leverages technology and process excellence, based on its Lean and Six Sigma heritage and Smart Enterprise Processes (SEP(SM)) methodology, to add value by lowering clients' total cost of ownership (TCO) and providing business impact such as incident reductions. The company is further developing its technology and IT infrastructure library consultancy/operations execution to complement its core Level 1/1.5 service desk offerings. Genpact is also expanding its practice to include robust desk side, asset management and software distribution services. The company has strong global and regional delivery capabilities, with help desk agents who can support delivery in more than 30 languages.
