Under the terms of the partnership agreement, Genpact's process-driven IT Managed Services business is deploying Ayehu's eyeShare™ IT process automation solution to provide clients with efficient and scalable workflows that increase return on investment (ROI) while reducing human error, costs, and adoption cycle times. These solutions make companies more competitive by enabling the IT department to become leaner, while avoiding excessive upfront investments whose long-term ROI can be challenged by volatile market conditions. Genpact is integrating this IT process automation solution for a large capital markets client with plans to deploy for a financial services client in the coming months.

"Our clients want us to help them improve the stability of their mission-critical systems while ensuring faster response times through short adoption cycles and less operational cost," said KNK Venkataraman, senior vice president and global leader, IT Managed Services, Genpact. "Genpact will leverage our deep process and domain expertise to first streamline and then automate IT processes using Ayehu's tools, therefore providing our clients with a combination of smarter processes and smarter technology to help them better compete."

IT processes are among the least automated department in many organizations, where IT personnel often spend their scarce time on mundane, repetitive tasks rather than on planning and resolving business-critical issues. Combined with Genpact's IT services, eyeShare IT Process Automation helps eliminate these labor-intensive manual interactions, providing an intuitive tool that automates key processes such as system, network and application tasks. Deployed by major enterprises worldwide and supporting thousands of IT processes, eyeShare empowers IT operations to automate simple and complicated tasks, free up scarce resources, and greatly improve service levels.

"IT process automation is a key solution for IT operations management to maintain high service levels while reducing costs of operations, replacing custom scripts and manual processes to create a scalable service model," said Gabby Nizri, co-founder and CEO of Ayehu. "Ayehu is honored to be partnering with Genpact whose enterprise presence, process expertise and customer-centric services are a perfect complement to Ayehu's enterprise-class IT process automation solution."
