Genpact to Help Transform Business Processes to Increase Productivity and Competitiveness for Boeing

Genpact to streamline key finance and procurement operations to support Boeing's growth strategy

NEW YORK, Sept. 29, 2015 /PRNewswire/ -- Leading aerospace and defense manufacturer The Boeing Company has chosen Genpact (NYSE: G), the architect of the Lean DigitalSM enterprise, as its strategic partner for business process services. Under the terms of the multi-year agreement, Genpact will be helping to streamline, standardize and manage Boeing's key international finance and accounting (F&A) processes, in addition to non-production procurement operations.

This partnership supports Boeing's strategy to improve business performance and productivity, reduce costs, and make its business operations more agile for the future.

"Our partnership with Boeing significantly leverages Genpact's investments and capability strengths," said Tiger Tyagarajan, president and CEO, Genpact. "At an emotional level, serving Boeing has been a dream of ours since becoming independent from GE in 2005. Our employees are as thrilled as I am to directly and indirectly support the success of such an admired company."
