

U.S. Rapid Action Consortium Commends President Biden's Call for Vaccines, Testing

Group focused on employees' safe return to offices sees requirement as driving individual health and wellness and workplace safety

NEW YORK, Sept. 10, 2021 /PRNewswire/ -- The U.S. Rapid Action Consortium commends U.S. President Joe Biden's call for companies with more than 100 employees to require vaccinations or weekly tests to ensure individual health and workplace safety. The Consortium also supports expanding easy-to-use testing production and making at-home tests more affordable.

The organization, which has been focused on reopening the U.S. economy quickly since its inception in March 2021, is helping companies accelerate the use of safe, cost-effective rapid COVID-19 testing to better enable businesses to return to the office safely.

Built on the highly successful Canadian model, the U.S. expansion is led by the Creative Destruction Lab Rapid Screening Consortium \(CDL RSC\), Genpact \(NYSE: G\) and the COVID Collaborative.

"President Biden's call for employers to do their part is a critical step in our collective fight against COVID-19," said Darren Saumur, global operating officer, Genpact and Advisory Committee Member of the U.S. Rapid Action Consortium. "Experts agree that COVID-19 will not be eradicated anytime soon, and rapid antigen testing, along with other actions, are essential to public and workplace safety. Testing and vaccinations are two critical elements of an effective reopening strategy that go hand in hand."

Founded on the belief that the private sector is and must be a powerful part of the overall solution to end the pandemic, the Consortium brings together leading academics, scientists, organizations, and businesses to accelerate the fight against COVID-19. The group is offering all learnings and approaches free of charge as a public good to organizations, large and small.

The U.S. Rapid Action Consortium is an expansion of the successful CDL RSC work done in Canada. The Consortium is leveraging thousands of hours of research, vast quantities of data, and insights from thousands of rapid tests conducted in more than 900 workplace testing sites across Canada.

"The CDL Rapid Screening Consortium has scaled from coast to coast in Canada. The program provides support, training, and an easy-to-use data reporting system to businesses of two employees to 200,000 employees. Since June 2021, our program uptake has increased by 500% and number of individuals regularly screened has grown by 200%," said Sonia Sennik, executive director, Creative Destruction Lab Rapid Screening Consortium and Advisory Committee Member of the U.S. Rapid Action Consortium.

Since their inception, the Rapid Action Consortium and CDL RSC have administered more than 630,000 tests across more than 900 locations. Results detected over 500 asymptomatic individuals, preventing more than 22,000 secondary infections from occurring.
