

Genpact Receives PRWeek Purpose Award for Accelerating Cost-Effective Rapid COVID-19 Workplace Testing at Scale

Recognition reflects Genpact's role in catalyzing the private sector as a force for good, bringing together academics, scientists, organizations and businesses to help reopen the US economy faster with rapid COVID-19 workplace testing

NEW YORK, Oct. 18, 2021 /PRNewswire/ -- Genpact (NYSE: G), a global professional services firm focused on delivering digital transformation, received an Honorable Mention at the PRWeek Purpose Awards, which recognized initiatives and innovations that use creative ideas to further positive causes and to acknowledge the organizations and individuals behind them.

Genpact was recognized in the Best B2B category for its role in creating the USRapid Action Consortium. Founded on the belief that the private sector must be a powerful force in fighting the pandemic, the Consortium has been focused on helping to accelerate the reopening of the US economy since its inception, helping businesses and organizations adopt cost-effective rapid COVID-19 testing practices to better enable employees to return to the workplace safely through proven testing frameworks. The US Rapid Action Consortium is offering learnings and approaches free of charge as a public good to organizations.

PRWeek Purpose Awards celebrate agencies, brands, public-sector organizations, non-profits, and NGOs at a time when consumers and employees are insisting that the brands with which they engage, and the organizations for which they work, communicate what they believe in and stand up publicly for those values. Staying true to its purpose, "the relentless pursuit of a world that works better for people," Genpact is using its digital and process expertise in solving complex business challenges for global organizations to help US companies safely return their employees to on-site work environments.

"As whatever is the new normal starts to emerge after 18 months of pandemic-induced lockdown, the focus on purposeful business assumes greater importance than at any time since we launched these awards in 2019," said Steve Barrett, vice president, editorial director of PRWeek US. "The winners of PRWeek's third annual Purpose Awards are blazing a trail for others to follow and seek to emulate."

"As the world manages through the ongoing impact of COVID-19, the ability for businesses to act quickly and decisively on employee wellness and workplace safety has never been more critical," said Stacy Simpson, chief marketing officer and global leader of corporate responsibility, diversity, equity, and inclusion, Genpact, and founder and co-chair, U.S. Rapid Action Consortium. "The Consortium was born out of a need for the private sector to come together to collectively learn, innovate, and iterate to create proven testing frameworks and access to critical resources that allow all employers to play a role in enabling wellness across their workforces and communities."

Genpact, in partnership with the Creative Destruction Lab Rapid Screening Consortium (CDL RSC), and COVID Collaborative, formed the Consortium to create a COVID-19 rapid action testing system that better enables US businesses to create safer workplaces.

The US Rapid Action Consortium is an expansion of the successful CDL RSC work done in Canada, of which Genpact is a founding member. Since their inception, the US Rapid Action Consortium and CDL RSC have administered more than 630,000 tests across more than 900 locations. Across locations, the rapid testing program has detected over 500 asymptomatic individuals, preventing more than 22,000 secondary infections from occurring.
