

Genpact Achieves CDP 'A' Rating for Climate Action

Recognition Places Genpact Among Global Leaders in Environmental Transparency and Climate Performance

NEW YORK, Jan. 29, 2026 /PRNewswire/ -- Genpact (NYSE: G), an agentic and advanced technology solutions company, today announced it has achieved a 'A' rating from CDP (formerly the Carbon Disclosure Project) in the Climate Action category. This recognition places the company among a select group of global leaders that demonstrate the highest standards of environmental transparency, climate governance, and performance. Access the CDP A List here.

CDP is a globally recognized disclosure platform that is fully aligned with ISSB's (International Sustainability Standards Board) IFRS2 climate related standard, as its foundational baseline. CDP is used by companies, investors, and other stakeholders to assess environmental impacts, climate risks, and sustainability strategies. In the latest CDP assessment cycle, Genpact was among only 4% (877 companies) of the nearly 20,000 companies scored that achieved an A score, highlighting the rigor and distinction of this recognition.

"Genpact's 'A' rating from CDP reflects our deep commitment to operating with integrity, delivering measurable environmental impact, and maintaining transparent, rigorous climate reporting," said Vidya Srinivasan, Enterprise Risk and Infrastructure Lead, Genpact. "Sustainability is embedded into how we run our business, and this recognition underscores the focus and collaboration of our global teams as we advance our climate ambitions."

Genpact earned the 'A' rating through key strengths in climate action. These include strong oversight and accountability in driving sustainability objectives, proactive climate risk management integrated into business processes, alignment of environmental considerations embedded into core business strategy, and performance excellence toward validated net zero targets under the SBTi framework.
